To whom it may concern

Re: Rudi Coulter, MSc Psychology

I can confirm that the above named student, Rudi Coulter, successfully completed the University's Research Training prior to gaining approval to carry out a research study: Investigating noticeable signs and symptoms of obsessive compulsive disorder (OCD) in childhood and adolescence. This research will be supervised by Dr Rosemarie Alonzo-Schulte.

The University of Roehampton, London and Laureate Online Education are committed to maintaining high ethical standards in the research undertaken by staff and students. Research involving human participants, their tissues or databases of personal, organisational or other confidential information must be approved by a recognised University Research Ethics Committee before field research can commence. The Research Ethics Committee will have sought assurances from the student on the safety and security of participants' information and data including its use, dissemination and storage. The relevant Ethics Committee granted approval for this study on June 3, 2019.

The Supervisor's role includes ensuring that the student being supervised receives relevant training and is aware of and understands that they are required to comply with all University regulations relating to research conduct and relevant external rules relating to research governance including, where applicable, legislation and statute. As such, Supervisors are in regular communication with students to assess progress and to advise on the conduct of the study.

I hope this information is sufficient for your needs, but please contact me if you need anything further.
